But for some reason, I am not understanding this problem: What time on Sunday? I'm not sure what to do because there's no time on the clock. A: Without something mentioned here, this question becomes impossible to answer, as we must be able to predict the future to answer it. But, with a little bit of speculation we can give a little bit of help. Our current time is 11:40. If we know that Sunday starts at noon, then we know that our day begins at 11:40. If we want to know what time Sunday ends, we have to calculate when 11:40 is in the future. It's a Sunday right now, so it's Sunday right now. We can also deduce that Sunday will end at 11:40 on Monday, so that 11:40 is in the future. I'm just going to stop here. Senior law enforcement officials have met with some Russian cyber-security experts in New York to discuss issues in this country and in Russia. In an interview with Russian media, the chief of the Federal Security Service, the successor agency to the Soviet KGB, warned that the United States was increasingly becoming a more serious threat to Russia. "Russia and the U.S. have become increasingly dependent on each other. This affects both countries. It's not like there was a full-scale war, but what is happening in the field of politics and intelligence services shows that the situation is going in that direction," said Nikolai Patrushev. "There are points of intersection and areas of conflict," he said. Last month the head of the Russian Foreign Intelligence Service, Aleksandr Bortnikov, delivered a blunt warning to Washington: "We see a very serious deterioration of our relations with the United States." He told journalists in Russia that the situation had deteriorated because of Washington's "stubbornness" towards Russia's violations of the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty and of the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty. ca3bfb1094

Inside a garage in Washington DC, a four-year-old boy is learning how to code from some of the tech industry's biggest names. Earlier this month, the boy's father posted on Facebook that his son, Lenny, would soon be learning to code. "I need some ideas for what to teach him, because I know nothing about it," the father wrote. "I'm a more common-man programmer, but I'd like to make my kid as computer-literate as possible," the father added. Six days later, Mr Binder got a reply from a name familiar to many in the tech community. Reddit's CEO, Steve Huffman, said he would try to help. Over the next six days, the two exchanged messages. Soon after, the boy met with the two. The two tech giants discussed what Lenny should learn first. When they finished, Mr Huffman asked: "Was there anything else you wanted to talk about?". The boy said he wanted to learn how to make a website. The Reddit co-founder said his team were already working on this and that he would have more information for the family later in the week. "I'm serious, when he's old enough, we're teaching him [coding] at home, and we'll do a lot of tutorials," Mr Huffman said. The boy, Lenny, was thrilled. "No, I'm sure you'll just be a very, very good computer person," Mr Huffman said. The two tech titans took pictures and video of their meeting with the boy, which Mr Huffman posted to Reddit and Mr Binder said he shared with his friends. "My friends are wondering what's up," he wrote. Mr Huffman ended the conversation by telling the boy to keep practising. "You're going to be very good," he said..
