Q: How to convert JSON to CSV which is faster and how to get one particular field Currently, I am using a java application which has json object and I need to convert it to csv. But it is taking a lot of time to do the conversion. Is there any way by which I can convert json objects to csv without converting into java object and getting the values? I have also tried the csvtools but I need to get a particular field value. Can it be possible? A: NPOI is a great tool for this, and also is a known supporter of Java. I would recommend converting your JSON to a POJO first using GSON. It will be faster in terms of performance, and easier to manipulate with other programs, such as Excel and the likes. Q: How to use $group in mongodb aggregate query I want to group by url and place all the document in one place. Could you please help me to solve the query.
