Parts made from a composite material have good damping properties (so-called high damping characteristics), but parts having higher damping characteristics are even more desirable. Many attempts have been made to create high damping materials in accordance with this desire. In the case of a laminate material having a plurality of layers (that is, two or more layers laminated to each other) of a resin (matrix resin) and a fibrous material (or fiber), a resin with a large modulus is used as the matrix resin for providing the strength of the laminate material, while a resin with a small modulus is used as the matrix resin for providing the desired damping property and the structure of the laminate material is designed to make a difference in damping properties between the inside and the outside of laminate material. For example, Patent Documents 1 and 2 disclose a bonded multi-layer laminate material in which the damping capacity is larger on the outside than on the inside. Furthermore, techniques for producing a laminate material having high damping properties in accordance with the structure of a metal complex single-phase metal matrix composite material composed of a metal and a fibrous material are disclosed in Patent Documents 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8. With an ordinary resin molding method, the shape of a molded product cannot be controlled in a direction in which the fibrous material is aligned (in the fiber direction). Therefore, it is difficult to precisely produce laminate materials having desired shapes and the amount of fiber aligned in a fiber direction is not large. Moreover, the single-

I've taken the last day or so to do my best to try and put some of the suggestions in the comments in place. For some reason, even with the html5 workarounds, the old parser wasn't able to properly load the old saves properly for some players, so I'm stuck with the needs of others for now. Because of the file format changes, a special stuff table was no longer enough to hold all the data, so I've wrapped my stuff table in a special "meta" table which provides a bunch of information about the table. The meta table, which is at the very top of the save file is picked up through calls to the javascript files which in turn pull the table and the other necessary data directly from the save files. This has sped up loading of data by a good deal, and I'm quite pleased with the results. On top of that, I've worked some with the actual game code to make things easier for the browser: Known browser bugs: IE8 Carry Over: A saved game will carry over to the new version of the game if the user makes that choice. Otherwise, I save the ruleset with a custom title (based on the title of the current ruleset) and the game moves on. I've
