tavalodi digar shojaeddin shafa pdf Pages November 23, 2007 Good morning! This is really my first post of this year, but my husband has to remind me that it is now the "official" start of the new year. No more 2007. Good grief!!! During the past week I've been invited several times to share my thoughts about the year that is ending. But when I looked at all the interesting, hardworking women that are blogging in the Black Friday blogging contest, I realized that it's going to be a really long post if I get to talk about everything I have done. I also learned that it would take a lot of cooling time - at least two hours - to get the crust to crisp up and set. So, I found myself taking the pie out of the oven at 11 o'clock at night - only to find a room full of people, all waiting to taste my first Mother's Day peaches. And, since I baked the crust, I had the worst pie crust I've ever had. And, of course, once I cut it, I saw that they were
